FUTURE PICKS

To: Reader 4/93
From: Comics Values Monthly
Re: Issue #81

The Comics Values Monthly staff continues to labor day and night to bring you the best of the picks, the finest of the features, the latest trends, and the most up to date prices in the industry. All this and Death's Head II as we venture across the water to visit Marvel UK, from whence the new popular characters (like Wild Thing and Blood Seed) threaten to be the next wave to invade the United States. Returning to the land of hot dogs and apple pie, we reveal Marvel's summer plans and explore an untapped collecting market with Marvel's giveaway comics, including a comprehensive list of the Marvel giveaway comics previously published. (Don't forget our own giveaway poster featuring Marvel UK's most nasty Death's Head II, Killpower, and the brand new hero/villain Die Cut. And, just when you thought we were through, wait 'til you see what we have in store for future issues:

1) CVM #82– focuses on the resurrection of Superman, backed by articles on Superman artists and DC giveaways. Remember, we were first on the scene when Superman passed away.
2) CVM #83– wanders into a new universe as we get the inside track on Malibu's "Ultraverse", Dark Horse's "Comic's Greatest World", and Topp's "Secret City."
3) CVM #84– explores "Deathmate", the Valiant/Image summer crossover, which looks like it will be the social event of the season.

Yours sincerely,

Steve Thomas
CVM Editor

● Take a deep breath, relax, close your eyes and open your minds as we prepare to take you on a virtual reality trip into the comic book world of Future Picks. Imagine, if you will, walking through the spatial doorways and entering the many different comic book dimensions. The sights, the sounds and the smells assail your sense as you become one with the universe of your choice.

● Now, open your eyes and prepare to be judged as you step through the portal to sign up for Marvel's Infinity Crusade. The final chapter of the Infinity trilogy brings together 35 of Marvel's most popular heroes in the ultimate battle of good versus evil. Jim Starlin, Ron Lim and Al Milgrom are your guides for this epic adventure. (The Crusade will cross over into Thor #463 and Dr. Strange #54. As a result of this storyline, the holder of the Reality Gem will be revealed in the upcoming new series, Warlock Chronicles). The hammer of the gods strikes again with Thunderstrike. While Thor is out in space, Eric Masterson swings his hammer against Black Axe and new villain Carjack back on Earth. Looks like stormy weather ahead!

● Stormy weather indeed as you fall from the sky aboard the Blackbird with Cyclops, Storm and Professor X into the chilly sub-zero temperatures of an Antarctic winter. Join Marvel's three hapless mutants as they struggle for survival in the sixty-four page X-Men Unlimited #1. Your choices then become even more limited in "Maximum Carnage", the Spider-Man crossover beginning with Spider-Man Unlimited #1. Teams of good, bad and downright nasty characters, reluctantly band together under the leadership of Spider-Man, Venom and Carnage, to duke it out over the streets of New York. Pick a side in this tangled web of mayhem. (Arachnophobics, beware of comic book crawlers.)

● Other short stops on the Marvel mystery tour include: Avengers #363, where you can smell the stench of death; Shadow Riders sending a Cable across the Atlantic; "Heavy Hitters" like Untamed and Midnight Men; and the 64 page made to fit Designer Genes featuring regular Marvel heavy hitters Spider-Man, Punisher and Sabretooth.

● Passing through the nexus of realities into the DC dimension, beware of parasites from the sky in the three wave annual crossover, "Bloodlines." You can be witness to the clash of hero versus alien, and the birth of the New Blood tainting the DC universe. The trail of blood starts with Lobo Annual #1, flowing through the summer annuals, and finally clotting in L.E.G.I.O.N. '93 Annual #4.

X-MEN UNLIMITED #1 ™ & ©1993 MARVEL ENTERTAINMENT GROUP

The New Blood circulates again in the two part Bloodbath. Be prepared for a transfusion.

● By the time you read this, it may already be "Knightfall." All the Arkham Asylum inmates have flown from the cuckoo's nest into Batman's belfry in the 19 part crossover commencing in Batman #492 and ending in Batman #500 where the Caped Crusader gets a new set of threads designed by fan favorite Joe Quesada. (Doug Moench and Russ Heath also team up Batman and Catwoman in Legends of the Dark Knight #46 against Batman. Speaking of team ups, DC and Comico have just announced the long awaited Batman/Grendel mini-series by writer/artist Matt Wagner slated for publication in 1993.) In the meantime, the green man from the red planet is looking for recruits to the Justice League Task Force. Pull your membership card from issue #1 and join J'onn J'onzz, Nightwing, Aquaman, Green Lantern and the Flash on a covert cruise to the Caribbean.

1963 #1 ™ & © 1993, ALAN MOORE, STEVE BISSETTE & RICK VEITCH

● However, vacations are limited for other DC heroes. Green Arrow #75 features GA, Shado and Speedy against the Black Archer. In fact, Speedy quick changes his name and expands his armory to become the all new Arsenal in New Titans #99. Whereas, Lobo doesn't really need an arsenal in Lobo: UnAmerican Gladiators written by Alan Grant and John Wagner (Batman/Judge Dredd: Judgement on Gotham) and drawn by Cam Kennedy (Star Wars: Dark Empire).

● Your senses have become distorted with Vertigo Visions: The Geek. Originally introduced in 1968 by creator Joe Simon and revitalized in 1989 by Neil Gaiman in Swamp Thing Annual #5, Brother Power returns in this one-shot written by Rachel Pollack (Doom Patrol) and drawn by Michael Allred (Madman). Continue the Vertigo spin with the latest titles, Skin Graft and The Last One.

● Now hop onto the Dark Horse chessboard with players Ian Edgington and Will Simpson and their pet Aliens, as a pawn, in the new title Aliens: Rogue. From there, you may solidify your position with Paul Chadwick's new series, Concrete: Eclectica. Then attack the other knights with the return of Two-Fisted Tales, with new adventures by Spain, Don Lomax and Wayne Vansant, interspersed with classic EC reprints by the late Harvey Kurtzman. (The cover is a first time collaboration by Kurtzman and Will Eisner.) Your final move is with Star Wars: Dark Empire Collection where the knights of the Jedi dethrone the evil Emperor.

● Take a trip through the mirror Image to reflect on a time long since past. The year is 1963, and your historians are Alan Moore, Rick Veitch and Dave Gibbons as you encounter the four member Mystery, Incorporated facing "Mayhem on the Mystery Mile". In addition, Jack Kirby (who created the classics of the '60's) returns to plot and pencil Phantom Force #1 with the inking help of rookies Jim Lee, Rob Liefeld, Todd McFarlane and many more.

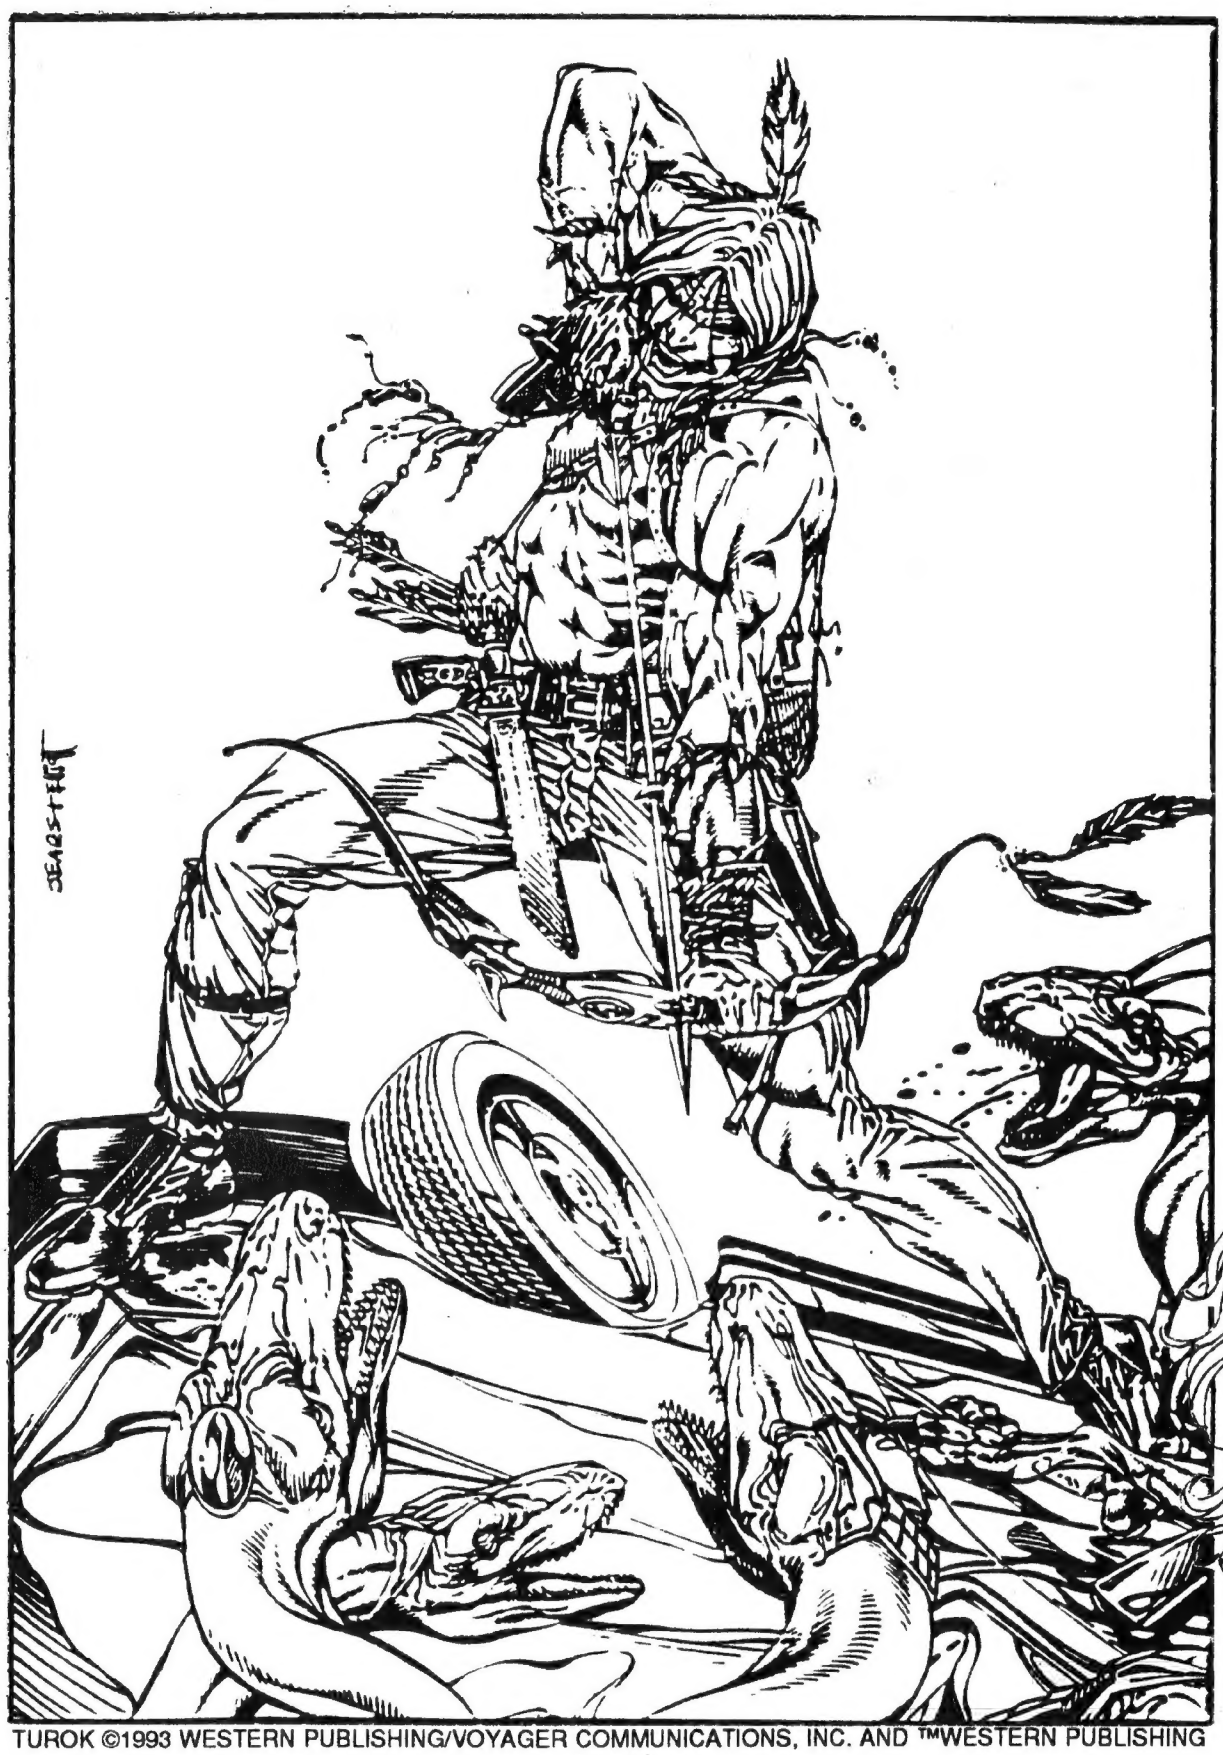
● From the '60's to the cusp of the twenty-first century, as Continuity prevails in the massive "Deathwatch 2000" crossover. Be there as the Hybrids pull together Continuity's greatest heroes to battle the evil forces of The Dragon and the Hellbenders in a fight to save earth from extinction. (All the titles will start over with #1's.)

● Time to grab your popcorn, sit back and enjoy the Topps triple feature. The curtain rises. (Keep quiet while the picture is playing.) The first feature on our triple bill is a wild and wacky chase between two worlds in the adaptation of Arnold Schwarzenegger's Last Action Hero, followed by a trip through the fiery pit when Jason Goes To Hell: The Final Friday. (Remember, no smoking in the theater.) The main feature takes you on a romp through Jurassic Park as dinosaurs abound in the adaptation of Steven Spielberg's movie by Walt Simonson, Gil Kane and George Perez. (Please follow the Exit sign when leaving.)

● From a walk in the park to the rain forests of South America, where you join Turok in his Valiant campaign against the deadly bionosaurs. David Michelinie, Bart Sears and Randy Elliott take you on a post-Unity trip in a world where the past meets the present.

● On the horizon, you see the Malibu sun still rising as the Protectors spinoffs continue with Man Of War and Ferret, the latter title sporting a full die-cut cover. From the land of the rising sun, Malibu's Eternity imprint brings you Zillion based on the hit anime from Tatsunoko Productions, whilst Walter Koenig beams up to script Raver for Malibu Comics.

● As we near the end of our trip, we ask you to focus on ANIA, the



TUROK ©1993 WESTERN PUBLISHING/VOYAGER COMMUNICATIONS, INC. AND ™WESTERN PUBLISHING

Association of Black Comic Book Publishers. Check out Ebony Warrior from Africa Rising, Heru, Son of Ausor from Afrocentric Books, Zwanna, Son of Zulu from Dark Zulu Lies, and Original Man and Purge from Omega Seven Comics.

● Finally, fasten your seatbelts as we take you on a kaleidoscopic journey through a plethora of publishers. Harvey/Eisner Award nominee Sarah Byam scripts the two part storyline running through Elfquest: Hidden Years #6-7 from Warp Graphics. Now Comics takes you through The Twilight Zone Science Fiction Special. Simon Bisley's Max Carnage is introduced in Heavy Metal Hardware by Heavy Metal Publications. Vampires roam the streets of Berlin in Bad Blood: Sugar Virus from Atomeka. Steve Niles and Alfredo Alcala present chilling stories in Grimm's Blood by Fantaco. Paradigm kicks off the U.N. Force tie-ins for Caliber/Gauntlet. Fleetway offers Chopper:Earth, Wind and Fire (from 2000 A.D.) and Judge Dredd: Hunt for the Black Widow. George Clayton Johnson scripts horror tales for Revolutionary with Deepest Dimension Terror Anthology. The 1960's Spy duo returns in Millennium's one-shot titled Man From U.N.C.L.E.: The End of the World Affair. Viz introduces the ultimate cyberweapon in Genocyber by Tony Takezaki. Alpha Productions celebrate The Detectives, a seventy year celebration of the private eye featuring classic comic book gumshoes like Michael Mauser, the Maze Agency and Mike Mist.

● Now, take some time to sit down and relax with CVM #81. We hope you enjoyed the ride. See you next month when the search for more worlds of imagination and fantasy continues.

MARVEL'S BRITISH INVASION

By Zoe Hawton

Great Britain, that small island that brought you The Beatles, Black Adder, The Queen and numerous wars, has recently infiltrated the United States with something new; their own sector of the Marvel Universe! After the commercial success of Death's Head, Marvel U.K. (Marvel's British branch) has blended new characters with more well known faces on the newsstands and in comic shops. However, this invasion of British Marvel heroes isn't a new phenomenon, because Marvel's British arm has been in existence since 1972, according to Dez Skinn, who was editor-in-chief of Marvel U.K. at that time.

"It all started with The Mighty World of Marvel," said Skinn, "in a bid to take advantage of comics in Britain. The American comics were returnable if they didn't sell and were suffering a very high return rate. But, the British package had firm sales and had remarkably low costs, because it reproduced black and white segments of material already published. This resulted in a very lucrative operation."

Increased British readership prompted Marvel to sandwich together popular titles like the Silver Surfer, Amazing Spider-Man and The Incredible Hulk in a magazine newsprint format. This led many readers to pick up the original American Marvel Comics. Paul Neary, current editor-in-chief of Marvel U.K. recalled, "Dez Skinn, the then editor-in-chief, wanted to originate material. At that point Marvel UK was already using Dave Gibbons, John Bolton, Pat Mills and David Lloyd. Steve Dillon had just sent some samples in, so all the potential big name talent was there, and it was starting to look exciting. I took over 18 months later as editor-in-chief. Unfortunately, the management at the time lost any interest in doing new stuff. The editorial staff scraped Captain Britain out with no real financial back-up from the then management. The dispiriting part was watching all our people leave for different companies. I also ended up leaving to pencil Captain America for Marvel US. Then, two years ago Jim Galton made it clear to me that things had changed. I was really enthusiastic, and since I returned I've been trying to put an even better creative team together with the help of my managing director, Vincent Conran; I think I'm succeeding."

The Man himself.

As far as sales in Britain go, Neary admitted, "The sales of all our American format stuff in Britain are very low. Out of a 365,000 print run of the Death's Head #1, only 5,000 came to Britain. As far as I'm concerned, it is something that we're looking into, but I don't see the newsstand market as being there anymore. We will approach it in time and I intend to tackle it properly, coming up with something revolutionary, and putting some money into it."

"We are a business," Neary continued, "and as such we had to lay down a line of comics that were economically viable and that gave us a foundation to work from. I do feel that we're doing this in the right order, we got big sales figures from Death's Head II, Wild Thing, and some of the other books. More importantly, people like them. If one of our creators wants to do a non-superhero book and play with his own ideas a bit, I can let him, as long as it doesn't lose money, and now, we've reached a point where it won't. If Dougie Braithwaite or Liam Sharp suggest something different, they've gained their freedom to try it. The mainstream sales are allowing us to explore."

Criticism has been levelled at the amount of U.S. characters who pop up in every British book, but as Neary explained this isn't as mercenary a sales ploy as it may appear. "A lot of writers love those characters", Neary said. "It's not because we specifically asked for them to appear. The creators just came in with storylines and they'd put the characters in, because suddenly they had a chance to."

Captain Britain was Marvel U.K.'s first successful import, with a move into a leadership role in Excalibur (one of the X-Men titles) making his appearances viable in the Marvel U.S. market.

"I brought him back in the UK and in the U.S.," remembered Neary, "but in a more indirect fashion. It was all kind of logical if you know the background. Alan Davis and Alan Moore were doing Captain Britain when I first left for Marvel America to draw Captain America, and Mike Carlin and I did a two issue story arc with Captain Britain in it, so he got into Marvel continuity that way. I continued working on various projects, some alongside Alan Davis including The X-Men where Alan and I worked with Chris Claremont, and that set things up for Excalibur. As a result, Captain Britain is bigger in the U.S. than the UK."

The Marvel U.K. Universe

The original run of Marvel UK's Knights of Pendragon wasn't successful, Neary explained. "When I got here, it was floundering, but we still ran it to the end. The second series did better because it was more mainstream, but I don't see it as having fulfilled its potential yet. The general problem is that if a book's sales fall to a certain level, it's almost impossible to wrench them back up. I'd rather stop it then do a nice limited series to reinstate the character."

Neary's editorial slant on Death's Head turned him from a low selling character into the Marvel U.K.'s hottest hero, complete with uncompromising image and attitude. Describing Death's Head's success, Neary said, "When I first saw him it was actually in the first series I canned. But a mini series was already roughly planned, started and budgeted for, which in retrospect I'm extremely glad about because otherwise I may never have picked up on it. Liam Sharp obviously liked the character as he began bombarding me with new designs and was really enthusiastic about redrawing it. His versions looked great so he and Dan Abnett got on with it, and it took off."

"Initially, the American editors weren't that keen. They liked the traditions of attractive characters; true to the Stan Lee ethic of a normal person who something unusual happens to, who then changes into something else, but can still become normal again. This helps the readers to relate to the hero. I wanted to try a new approach, combining technology and no set logic. I genuinely believe that the public is capable of accepting a hero that they could never identify with. If we can accept computers, we can accept anything. I think at the moment, in economic gloom, people find anything succeeding against all odds a very powerful and liberating fantasy, and our characters generally fit that framework like computer games, crazy constructs able to jump through time and space with great abilities, battling evil and always winning ultimately. The other thing about Death's Head was that he was cosmetically challenged, he's not a pretty superhero and it makes him distinctive. He was also a great starting ground for Liam and Dan who are now both involved in much of our output."

Building on the success of Death's Head II and the other heroes of the Marvel U.K. universe, Pumping Iron is the group name for three titles due in June: Death's Head II & Die-Cut, Battletide II, and Killpower: The Early Years.

"This is the most exciting group of titles I've been let loose on yet," said Jaqui Papp, editor of the Pumping Iron trilogy of titles. "Death's Head II is a fabulously strong character and worked so well with Killpower in the first Battletide limited series. The muscle/metal bound character's rapport, when written by Dan Abnett and Andy Lanning, combined heavy duty action with a brilliant sense of humor. The second series will be by the same winning team. When the first books had finished, it was just so evident that the market was wide open for more, and that's just what they'll get!"

Battletide II

For those not in the know, Killpower is one of MyS-TECH's home made monsters, a cocktail of animal genes with the mind of a twelve year old boy. He was originally designed as MyS-TECH's ultimate killing machine and introduced in the Marvel UK series, Motormouth. The new Killpower: The Early Years probes this character's years at Mys-TECH in a four issue limited series.

"Working on Motormouth," reminisced Papp," was great fun. She was kind of Jiminy Cricket in the form of the runaway Killpower. She teaches him that mass destruction is not the only means to an end. We will fill in the years before he left MyS-TECH where he had been taught to believe that killing was a pleasant pastime to be indulged in by one and all. In this series, he is mentally aged about five and completely under the evil MyS-TECH Board's control. We can really let rip with some explosive action combined with childish humor. It should be great fun."

The third Pumping Iron book explores Death's Head II's 106 personalities knocking around in his circuitry. In Death's Head II & Die-Cut, one of those personalities breaks loose.

"Death's Head II & Die-Cut is a two issue limited series," Papp commented, "where Die-Cut is literally created from Death's Head. Caught in a tight corner, Death's Head digs into his personalities in search of a scientist to get him out of trouble. The personality becomes dominant and builds itself a cyborg body, leaving our horned hero one less aspect. The combination of writer Glenn Dakin and the nature of the new character creates a good balance of humor, wit and hard hitting action (with) Glenn providing the humor and Die-Cut providing the brute force. Both promise brutal action with Die-Cut coming across as an absolute schizoid, bladewielding, drooling maniac."

One of Marvel U.K.'s distinctive traits is the villains. Traditionally, single super villains have been specific to certain characters, but The MyS-Tech Boards (shortly to become the Techno-Wizards) provide the catalysts right across the UK line.

"It provides a cohesion," said Neary. "We needed something to hold it all together, and if we overdo, it could become boring."

Dear Brian,

I've been collecting comics for three years now, and Aliens #4 was the first comic I ever purchased. The cover was great, the drawings were great, and the price was right. At the time I had never even heard of Dark Horse, but now I am well aware of their product. Now, myself and all of my friends think Dark Horse is the best. Marvel has disappointed me with their crappy drawings, and their crappy superheroes (at least DC knows when to kill one off).

Why do Valiant comics go up in price so fast? Nobody I know buys them; the store I go to still has some Valiant from a couple of weeks ago. Some of them don't even make sense – Bloodshot – a white guy who goes around killing people for no reason. This is just the same as the Punisher! They're all the same: one guy goes in with a handgun against one hundred gangsters with machine guns; one guy comes out (he may have to comb his hair, but he's all right!).

And how does all this look for Death: The High Cost of Living, one of DC's better comics?

Jim Vivas
Ronkonkoma, NY

P.S. Would a person who buys mostly Marvel Comics be a fanboy? (Because he is not allowed to get some Independent comics because of his mother). By the way, his name is Sean. Hi Sean!

Dear Jim,

Valiant comics are going up in price because they're high quality books with excellent continuity. I'm really surprised to hear that they're languishing on the shelves in Ronkonkoma; they're leaping off the racks in most other locations. Still, there are always unaccountable differences in sales between different regions of the country.

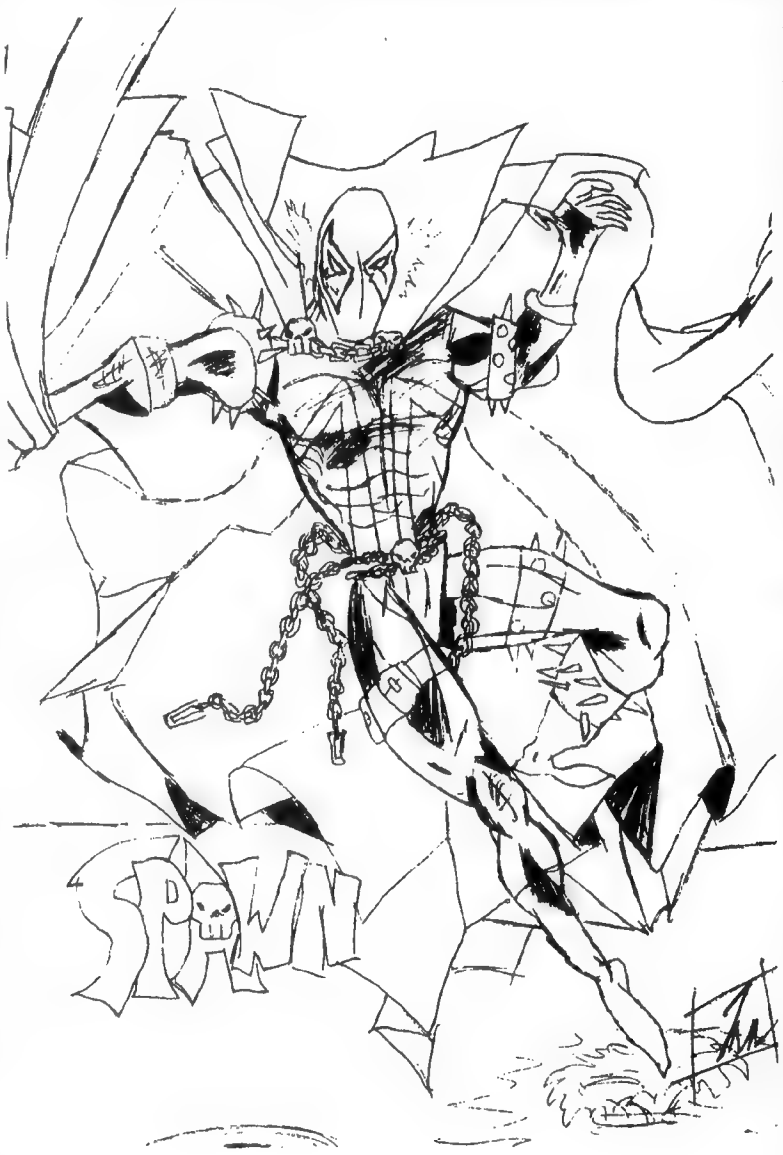
As for your complaint about one tough guy taking out one hundred bad guys – that's why they call them superheroes. Anytime you stop and think about the plots of these books, you'd have to admit they're patently ridiculous. It's the suspension of disbelief that we afford ourselves as readers that make the stories palatable. Of course, some stories are more believable than others; what we, as readers, are willing to accept is the determining factor in which sort of comic book we read.

I have no idea what all this means for Death: The High Cost of Living – but it just happens to be one of CVM Editor Steve Thomas' favorite comic books, and nobody ever writes in about it, so I didn't edit that little bit out of your letter. (Although I'm sure Death believes the Punisher could take out a hundred punks without breaking a sweat).

Believable Brian

P.S.: Actually, I think it makes Sean's Mom a fanboy.

P.P.S.: Steve was wondering if anybody out there knows who the model for Death was, and if her phone number is in the book.



Tim Murr Kingston TN

Dear Brian,

I recently purchased two comics from an antique store. They aren't listed in your magazine. These comics are Journey Into Mystery #'s 16 and 18, both written by Stan Lee. I was wondering if you could tell me how much they are worth?

Also, I have a question about UPC symbols. Is it worth more to have them on the comics? I have two copies of New Mutants #93, one with UPC, and one without.

Jim Westfall
Renton WA

Dear Jim,

If you paid more than two bucks for those Journey Into Mystery books, you paid too much. Those comics were part of the second series of that title, and have never been highly collectible. For a more complete listing of books like this (and Golden Age, Underground, Foreign, Marvel, DC, and other publishers) you should consult our Comic Values Annual (available June 15, 1993), which lists all the books we can't find space to run every month.

UPC codes do not alter the value of a comic by appearing on the cover. It only signifies the difference between newsstand (with) and direct market (without) copies.

Clarifying Brian

Dear Brian,

I met you at the Great Eastern Convention at the Jacob Javits Center, and I must say it was a pleasure. I have a few questions concerning special edition comics and the sudden and massive outburst of Marvel UK.

I'm fifteen and have been collecting for over seven years; I buy a wide range of comics every month. In the last couple of years some comic companies released special edition comic books (i.e Gold, Platinum, etc.). These comics are considered untouchable to collectors like me who have limited weekly funds for comics. When I do get the chance to save up enough to purchase one of these comics I would like to know what I'm getting.

What exactly is an ashcan comic? I have seen a Pitt ashcan, and they are pretty small in size compared to a regular comic book. Is there anything different within the pages of a Gold comic book that cannot be found within the regular version of it? And, finally, are Gold comics worth spending a bundle of money?

Within the last year or so Marvel has "bombarded" our comic stores with U.K. titles. I work in a comic store and I must say that a majority of these titles really don't sell. Some of these titles even go up for sale at a reduced price because nobody buys them for cover price. I recently looked at a Marvel preview book for the summer and I saw that Marvel has planned ten or more titles for their U.K. series of comics. What is it with Marvel? Who actually likes these U.K. titles?

If Marvel actually gets to read my comments here, please give Iron Fist his own series! (You guys gave just about everybody else from the seventies their own series).

Brendan Smyth
Address Witheld On Request

Dear Brendan,

Thanks for stopping by our booth at the convention, it's always nice to meet our readers face to face.

Aschcan comics are just pre-press editions of a regular comic designed to be used as a selling tool. These comics normally have a non-glossy cover but, besides from that, have the same content as a regular comic. They are mostly used for selling to newsstand distributors.

Now, on to the gold cover question. This is a little tricky, as it involves a little self-examination. Regarding these covers a collector must set his priorities; Are you buying the comics for investment purposes only, or are you buying them because you love to read them?

If you're buying the books only for investment purposes, it would seem that gold covers are the way to go. Just look at the prices on the gold cover Valiant stuff; they've gone through the roof. But, there is a questionable point here – will these gold comics be valued as highly 20 years from now? Will they continue to be valued so much higher than their glossy covered shelfmates? I don't think so; I think 20 years from now, when people are buying 1990's comics, they'll only be shelling out the big bucks for stories with good art and coherent storylines. Now, some of these gimmick covers possess these attributes; some don't.

If you're buying the books because you love to read them, then just forget about the gold covers. You can obviously buy more books if you stick to normal, run of the mill comics. Buy the comics that you like, don't buy the comics that are all show and no go.

If you're buying books for reading and investment purposes, then keep a sharp eye on what you pay extra money for. If the book has a gold cover, and nothing but filler inside, then it will probably never be worth more than just a little above cover price. However, if the book is important in terms of the creative teams involved, or if it is a major point in a books' continuity, or if it introduces a new character (who becomes popular), then it may, one day, become very valuable. If this is the case, then the gold cover will definitely be a boost to the collectibility factor.

Basically, what I'm saying about gold covers is – buy the books you enjoy to read. They'll always be valuable to you. If you don't read the books, then by all means buy up all the gimmicks you can get your hands on; you'll get just what you deserve.

About the Marvel UK comics – we think they're pretty good. If you're reading this page it means you've already seen our cover and our free poster. You should check these books out, we think you'll like them. And, if you can buy them at less than cover price, so much the better. A little bargain never hurt anybody.

If everybody from the seventies is getting their own books from Marvel, what about me? I'm from the seventies! How about The Adventures of Big Belly Brian Kelly? Forget about Iron Fist, I can do that martial arts thing; as a matter of fact, I'll fight Iron Fist. He's never seen anything like my chicken rondelet kick.

Keep on sending in your art for our ongoing CVMail Pick contest, or for our brand new Gallery Page; as you can see from the art reproduced on these pages we're getting some great stuff!

DC Marvel's not the only company churning out the special covers. Although it's not being done quite so quantitatively at DC, it's becoming more and more a regular practice to boost sales. This is great in the short term, but can't we take a lesson from the card market? So far, DC's Vertigo stuff looks great with Death:The High Cost of Living leading the way. Really looking forward to Sandman #50; it should fly right off the shelves. Of course the big story here is how to order the new Superman titles? There's bound to be a lot of publicity so the demand will probably be high. Still, I don't want to go crazily out of budget. It's better to sell out than get stuck!

MARVEL The march of the gimmick covers continues with Avengers #360, Secret Defenders #1, Amazing Spider-Man #375, Venom #1, She-Hulk #50, Hellstorm #1, etc, etc, etc. The worst part about this current trend is that these books are selling out so quickly! Why do I say the worst part? Because all of Marvel's regular titles, which people actually used to read (what's that?), are now being put back on the shelves and left to deteriorate in the back issue bins. If you haven't already, cut your orders of all the regular Marvel titles, except those special issues, to the bone.

OTHER PUBLISHERS If Image could get some books out on a regular schedule, they could give Marvel a run for their money. The big question is, can they keep the quality up across the board. If they were pulling out umpteen million titles a month like Marvel is, their quality would be bound to go down. Keep an eye out for the new Alan Moore comic 1963: Mystery Inc. Based on pre-orders Turok: Dinosaur Hunter from Valiant looks as solid a hit as anything those guys do these days. They seem to have the Midas touch. Rai & the Future Force #9 was also a big hit with the customers. I must get several calls a day for back issue and limited edition Valiants. I wish I had a backroom full. By the time people finish paying for all the special issues of the aforementioned companies, they don't have much left over for the new Alien mini-series. This may change soon as Dark Horse is debuting a new line of super hero books to try and keep in the race. Stay tuned!

DC In general, Hardware #1 is selling well, lots of people are looking to the milestone books (not just African-Americans). Folks are already looking for the resurrection of Superman stuff. Doomsday and Funeral for a Friend still sell out. DC's done it again, Batman #'s 492-500 the Knightfall storyline is going to be gargantuan. I have noticed, however, that the background art in an ad for the story uses art from #491 in the background. I feel this is the true beginning of the storyline, so watch out for it. Vengeance off Bane Special #1, is also a direct tie-in to the story . Showcase issues may deal with the storyline, too. Where does this thing begin? Word from the grapevine is that Bats is going to hang up the cowl. Could this have anything to do with Nightwing? Only time will tell. On the vertigo front Death:The High Cost of Living is selling very, very well but the others are not even close. Sandman Mystery Theatre does O.K., Enigma #1 sold well but #2 is just sitting here. These books seem to have a core following that has increased a little with the Vertigo imprint. However, Death merchandising is selling quite briskly.

MARVEL Ren & Stimpy is a really funny, silly book that is selling incredibly well. I know dealers who are willing to give me $7.50 apiece for #1. #3 is in the shortest supply and #1 is in a third printing. Ravage 2099 came out the same week as Ren & Stimpy and Ren & Stimpy outsold it! The X-Books just ain't what they used to be. They're just sitting here. Venom has sold very well with #1 already going above cover. Hellstorm has done itself proud with the parchment cover and gorgeous artwork. Namor, because of Jae Lee has also been doing very well. Gimmick covers sell, but just for the cover. Avengers before and after #360 are just hanging around. Marvel is about to lose their grip as big dog on the post. I received 300 Youngbloods yesterday and have 40 left, 'nuff said.

OTHER PUBLISHERS Valiant and Image!! Dark Horse is putting out good stuff that gets mediocre interest except for the Aliens and Predator books. I haven't seen Magnus Vs. Predator in over four months! Rai & the Future Force #9 is big!! Valiant sales have tripled in the last three months, although I used to sell an abnormally low amount. Image continues to go up, up and away.

DC It's been a good winter season for DC, beginning with the Funeral For a Friend storyline and continuing with the Legacy of Superman #1. The Vertigo kickoff has been good, with the existing titles selling about 20% over normal, with Death and Enigma selling out at Batman-like numbers. Speaking of which, the Vengeance of Bane special was great and sparked interest in his crossovers into regular Batman. Flash #'s 73 & 74 with the return (?) of Barry Allen were sellouts. Justice League America #72 with a non-Superman story, but with a seventies type renegade Justice League, kept the Superman readers on the book and was a sellout. See what happens when you sell your comics to readers.

MARVEL Secret Defenders #1 did well, as did Venom #1. There's a lot of resistance to the price structure of the Hudson Comics (Venom #2, Fantastic Four Unlimited #1) and it looks like only the hot crossover type issues will sell at $2.95 or $3.95. The enhanced Amazing Spider-Man #375, Avengers #360 and Iron Man #290 were also killers, but watch for the subsequent issues to sit until there's an enhancement issue.

OTHER PUBLISHERS All Valiants and Images continue to fly off the rack. Spawn #7 has not sold out (at cover price, of course) after thirty days of shelf-time at identical numbers to #6. This could be the beginning of the Image investors exodus. Black and Whites are, unfortunately, dead. The color and enhancement glut keep dollars away from them.

ADDITIONAL COMMENTS If Continuity's upcoming crossover series actually comes out in some semblance of regularity, they could be real sleepers. Retailer confidence in Neal Adams' company is so low, they are certainly to be under ordered, whereas books like Turok #1 will probably have a million plus print run (no Harbinger here). Also watch out for Topps' Kirby comics (especially the number ones). With a good marketing campaign, they should appeal to both young and old alike.

DC O.K. I've said it before but I'll say it again, Superman + Death = $$$$. Even titles like Legacy of Superman, Superman Gallery and Supergirl/Team Luthor have done extremely well. Another DC title that has done particularly well is Hardware. Time will tell if the other milestone titles will be as hot. The biggest bummer from DC is Vertigo. While Death: The High Cost of Living and Sandman Mystery Theatre did well, the others such as Enigma, Sandman and Doom Patrol did not.

MARVEL As the months go by, people keep complaining about books being priced at $2.95, $3.95 and $5.95. It would be different if this increase in price were matched by a corresponding increase in page count and quality of story and art, but this has simply not been the case. Because of the drastic increases in prices of their comics, customers are faced with the unfortunate situation of cutting back on some of their Marvel in order to get their hands on these "Flashy" covers. This has put retailers in a usually wind up being stockpiled in their slow moving back issue bins. Marvel needs to keep in mind that the reason comics just aren't for kids anymore shouldn't be because they can't afford them.

OTHER PUBLISHERS Image comics still at an incredible rate, with Spawn leading the pack. Image back issues are almost nonexistent and, when available, command a premium price (especially the coupon books). Valiants in these parts still do not show significant movement. New Valiants are not selling well at all. Back issues of Valiant are starting to show a little bit of light.

DC In the last quarter of '92, sales increased slightly. Of course, Superman did exceptionally well. Demand is still high, with #75 averaging $30. With regards to new titles, Darkstars and Hacker Files are sleeper hits, while Guy Gardner, Heckler and Hammerlocke are dying on the shelves. We've heard good things about the Vertigo line from many customers.

MARVEL Many Marvel books are dropping in sales, due to the amount of product available. Nightstalkers, Darkhold and some core titles are losing out to the new kids- the 2099 books, multiple copies of X-Titles and gimmick covers. Ren & Stimpy is doing well in all age groups. Silver-Age book sales are starting to grow again, as more Fanboys (and Fangirls too) become serious collectors.

OTHER PUBLISHERS Valiant books continue to fly off the shelf. We have had to limit ours to one to a customer until our numbers come into line with demand. Dark Horse titles are dropping slightly, the nonmovie books just don't seem to sell well. The new Vampirella book by Harris was an instant sell through. We have even noticed an increase in demand for those "Adult" comix. We realize that Image wants to be a Major contender, but we feel that they should first work on getting all of their books out on time before announcing so many new projects. I have the utmost respect for Jim, Rob and the gang, but they need dependability and timeliness.

DC Superman mania has calmed down lately, although Funeral for a Friend sold as well as The Legacy of Superman, but The Return of Superman could start it all over again. I sell Superman #75 (collector's edition) for $35. Lobo sales are down because of the absence of Bisley. Robin III did only so-so. I think DC is heading in the right direction with its Vertigo titles. Death #1 sold much better than Heckler, Hammerlocke, Valor and other such titles combined.

MARVEL Venom is the magic word right now for Marvel. Sales are very healthy for his mini-series, appearances and his origin issue in Amazing Spider-Man #300 (which is the most sought after back issue). In addition, back issue Spider-Man has picked up this month. Webhead's popularity is showing no signs of decreasing. The sleeper hit was definitely Ren & Stimpy #1. We have only had Ren & Stimpy on T.V. recently. Who knew just how much demand there would eventually be from people?! I'm wondering if the Simpsons will follow suit.

Of course all the special cover, anniversary issues sell well, but there are just too many coming out. I think it's time to concentrate on a good story and art, than on what bizarre cover can be thought of next. New Marvel titles such as Secret Defenders and Surfer/Warlock:Resurrection are selling respectably.

OTHER PUBLISHERS The popularity of Valiant and Image is still on the up rise with no end in sight. Pitt #1 was sold out in two days and I expect the same from Wetwork and Darker Image. Spawn is the best selling title I have and back issues go steadily (#1-$8, #2-$5.5, #3-$5, #4-$6.5). Almost all Image is hot except for Supreme and Brigade, the two dogs.

As for Valiant, Bloodshot is doing well and there is high anticipation for Turok #1. His guest-appearance in X-O Manowar #14,#15 are hot (especially with the Bart Sears pencils). Most of the Valiant back issues are in demand (no surplus here). Dark Horse may be back on an upswing as there is high interest in Aliens, Colonial Marines and Predator: Race War.

INTERNATIONAL

DC DC hits back with Superman & makes up with falling sales. Limited interest in new Batman titles. Robin has sold well, since the new costume, but is now falling. Lobo delays didn't impress anybody.

Marvel Spidey maintains popularity. Old Death's Head back issues are becoming rare. The more often Hulk changes color, the more popular he becomes. Interest is fading from the Infinity Gauntlet/Wars/Watch. Considering in Infinity Gauntlet, nothing ended up happening. X-Men art is fading.

Other Publishers Dark Horse, Aliens hype is weakening. Star Wars is taking its place. Next Men continues to do well. No sign of a Miller/Darrow comic. Image is big, along with Spawn. Valiant is picking up fast.

CARDBOARD HEROES

By Thomas E. Range II

Recently, there has been a boom in the non-sports card industry , and even though it's nearly impossible to keep on top of all the different cards that are coming out, this column will deal with those releases we feel are important for the card collector to be informed of.

CURRENT HITS

There has yet to be a comic book convention that I have attended that I haven't been asked for a pack of Marvel Masterpiece cards. These cards are beautiful, and definitely warrant some attention. The price of packs is about double that of the previous Marvel Universe and X-Men cards, but they are well worth it. The set is 100 cards, with five premium cards that look like a cross between chromium cards and gold etching. The print run is supposedly nowhere near that of the Marvel Universe cards, which has added to the collectibility of this set. The Marvel Masterpiece cards were released the same week as another current card hit, the Doomsday cards.

For those of you who do not believe the Doomsday cards are rare: You're wrong, they are! No one I know has them, and I have heard prices of $2.00 to $2.50 a pack. What makes these cards so special? To be honest, it's not the art. What makes them so expensive is their rarity, and the chase cards in the set. There were only 80,000 boxes produced, which is a very small print run (for every box of cards produced, there was 625 Superman #75 printed). With those limited numbers, completing a set is difficult. A set contains 90 cards, plus 4 chromium/gold etched cards, plus two more special cards. Let's face it, this set is hard to complete!

NEW RELEASES

I have just received the True Crimes II and Crime and Punishment cards. The True Crimes are just like the original set, but with different people and two chase cards. The cards themselves are artists renditions of famous criminals, with information about the criminals on the backs. The two chase cards are holograms of the Rodney King beating, and an electric chair. The Crime and Punishment cards will have two series. The series will contain information on nine different trials. In the first series, the following trials are reviewed from the commission of the crime to the court case itself; Wayne Williams, Charles Manson, Patty Hearst and Sirhan Sirhan are chronicled. The cards are artists portraits and renditions of different topics covered in the abovementioned cases.

Another new release is the X-men II cards. The set again contains three holograms, and this time Skybox has made them hard to find, compared to last years set. Last year, there were about 5 to 7 holograms in each box, making the holograms not as rare, hence not as valuable. This year, with only 2 to 3 holograms per box, they will be much rarer. This set will also contain a subset of gold stamped cards; they will look exactly like the regular cards, but will have "30" stamped in the corner (in commemoration of the X-Men 30th Anniversary this year). There are about 5 gold cards per box. In addition to all that, this set will also contain three- dimensional cards; at 1 per case of boxes (about 1 in every 720 cards) they will be very rare. I've seen the Wolverine card, and it looks like he's bursting right out of the card; it looks great.

THINGS TO COME

Some card series that are due out in a few weeks are: Star Wars, DC Cosmic Teams, Greg Hildebrandt II and James Bond 007.

The new Star Wars Galaxy set is due out any day now, and, no, I don't know what color they are going to make this one (but I doubt it will be either blue, red, yellow, green, or orange/brown). This set celebrates Star Wars 15th anniversary, and I'm sure it will be a popular set.

DC has decided to have Skybox create another non-sports series based on their popular superheroes. They look like a major improvement over last year's Cosmic cards. The series will have 150 cards with top teams, superheroes, super villains, and nine new DC characters (who will appear in summer '93 books). This series will contain 6 holograms: Captain Marvel, Lobo, Hawkman, The Spectre, Superman (hey, I thought he was dead) and Swamp Thing. There is no Batman in this series, as only Topps is licensed to create Batman cards.

Comic Images is coming out with Greg Hildebrandt II: Thirty Years of Magic. This series will be a 90 card set, with randomly assorted autographed cards, and 6 chromium chase cards. If you liked the first series, you'll like these.

Also in store for the future are James Bond 007 cards. These cards will be produced by Eclipse in recognition of the 30th anniversary of the first James Bond movie. A set of these will consist of 110 cards and unlike the original set from the 1960's, these cards will be in color. The set contains stills and rare behind-the-scenes shots from the first four Bond movies. Two hologram cards will be inserted, one depicting the villain Oddball, the other a shot of Bond's Aston-Martin.

A BLAST FROM THE PAST

In celebration of Star Wars' 15th anniversary, I would like to mention the original Star War's cards from the late 1970's. In 1977 Star War's cards hit the convenience stores, depicting scenes from the movies, or pictures of cast and crew. The backs contained information about the movie, or pictures of the cast and crew, along with a trivia question. The front of the cards had a blue border, and each of the packs contained a sticker. The cards, due to age and the popularity of the movie, are worth some money, but the really hard things to get are the stickers. Most of these were stuck on refrigerators, or notebooks, and therefore destroyed.

Due to the popularity of this set another series of these cards was issued. These cards had the same format as the first set, and continued the numbering sequence, but they had a red border. Again, this series sold out, and another series was made, with a different color border. This continued on until the last series, which was orange/brown. This is why the series are referred to as Blue, Red, Yellow, Green, and Orange/Brown.

Watch this space for more hot card news.

"PRISM" CUT STICKERS

We have recently found a large number of stickers which resemble Prism cards. They can be purchased for $.50 from vending machines found in the exits from super-markets, drug stores and similar spots. The Marvel Universe and X-Men stickers use the same art and design found in Impel/SkyBox's Marvel Universe I and Uncanny X-Men cards, and are sometimes offered for resale in comic shops for $5.00 to $7.50. SkyBox informed us that they are unauthorized. The Batman Returns stickers contain comic book style art. DC Informed us that they are authorized but that the other Batman stickers were not authorized. Many of the other stickers have no copyright data, and may also be unauthorized. The list below is undoubtedly incomplete. New sets of stickers have appeared in the last few weeks. Please let us know about the stickers available in your area.

GIVING IT ALL AWAY: COMIC BOOK FREEBIES PART I

By Robert J. Sodaro
©1993 Freelance Ink

You're looking to build your comic book collection, and you've already purchased all of the "hot" comics currently available but it's not enough. You want to add some depth to your collection, something beyond what can be pulled from the shelves of your average comic shop. Still, you don't want to pick up just any book; you want something that will appeal to you, as well as being a worthwhile investment.

Oddly enough, there is a whole genre of books that are relatively unnoticed, but which fill these criteria. They are "giveaway" or "special interest" books, comics that are produced by companies like Marvel, DC, and others, that feature their heroes, or their artists and writers. Subsequently, they are not produced for newsstand sales, but for a specific market. Nonetheless, these giveaways often find their way into the fan market. Unless you know something about them, they slip by unnoticed.

These specialty comics run the gamut in respect to form, content, and purpose; ranging from comics packaged in games or toys, to public service comics pushing an awareness message, to comics that are truly independently produced to advertise a store or consumer item. They also come in various sizes, from the standard newsstand size, to mini comics that fit in the palm of your hand. As diverse as they are, they all have one thing in common. They adapt the comic book medium to pitch a message or product. In addition, they are usually distributed free to a targeted market. The company with the widest range of giveaways is Marvel Comics.

SPECIALTY BOOKS MARVEL STYLE

For years Marvel has staffed an entire department specifically dedicated to producing these comics. Perhaps the most well-known of these comics is the one that actually has a wider circulation than "the Death of Superman" (Superman #75, 3 million), X-Force #1 (4 million), and X-Men #1 (8 million) combined. Distributed free since it first appeared in 1984, it has never been out of print; and, as of 1990, its circulation topped 15 million. The comic featured Spider-Man and Power Pack, and was produced in conjunction with the National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse. The comic offers two tales: one featuring Spider-Man, and the second, the Power Pack Kids. The first story deals with Spidey coming to the aid of a young boy who is being sexually molested by his babysitter. During the course of the story, Spidey reveals that, as a young boy, he was also sexually molested by an older boy. (Although not often referred to, this is an accepted part of the official Spider-Man canon) In the back-up story, the four Power Kids come to the defense of a schoolmate of theirs who is being assaulted by her father.

Both stories, which were written specifically for kids who are being abused, reinforce the lesson that kids shouldn't let anyone touch them in any way that makes them uncomfortable, and that they should tell a trusted adult if anyone attempts to do so. This hugely successful comic campaign has resulted in its distribution to social services centers around the country, as well as its placement in various newspapers over the past eight years. This comic was followed by two more; one which deals with emotional abuse ('87; sponsored in part by 7-Eleven); and the most recent one about physical abuse ('90).

There are many other Marvel specialty comics that promote some type of safety or public service message. All of these books are ostensibly public service books. However, they are subsidized by various companies, sometimes with the intent to hype a product of the sponsoring company.

The Amazing Spider-Man vs. The Prodigy is, perhaps, the most unusual, as it is a mini-comic sponsored by Planned Parenthood. In it, Marvel's web-slinger battles the Prodigy, an alien that is utilizing his hypnotic vocal powers to convince teenagers that just because they have unprotected sex doesn't mean they're going to get pregnant. It is his hope that, if enough teenagers have indiscriminate sexual relations, many will bear children which he will then kidnap for slave labor.

Although the plot was not the greatest, the book does help to dispel some of the myths about sex. (The Prodigy speaking: "Imagine! They really think you can't get pregnant before you're fifteen, or the first time, or if you only do it once in a while.") The story is followed by a couple of text pages filled with truths about sex and babies, homosexuality, and V.D.

Captain America and the Campbell's Kids is an energy awareness book where Cap and a group of children battle a trio of villains intent on disrupting the world's energy supply. Between chapters, the Campbell's Soup Kids offer energy-saving tips. There are also puzzles and games with a conservation theme.

Spider-Man, Storm, and Power Man vs. Smokescreen has Spidey (the star of most of Marvel's giveaway books) helping a young athlete to kick the smoking habit: this book is sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

Captain America and the Asthma Monster, sponsored by Glaxo, Inc.(the maker of an asthma medication), features Cap teaming up with children to battle a villain who wants to give asthma to everyone he encounters, in retribution for his own childhood condition.

Spidey's Adventures in Reading book (sponsored by the Literacy Volunteers of America) encourages youngsters to read, as Spidey and a few kids are transported through the "worlds" of several books while being pursued by the Troglodyte. Oddly enough, an error crept into this literacy tome, as a flock of Pteranodons are misidentified as Pterodactyls.

Marvel's staunch anti-drug stance, begun in the newsstand Amazing Spider-Man #96, carries through many of their special issue comics. A Spider-Man four part series (guest starring Ghost Rider in issue three) appeared exclusively in Canada. In the first issue, Spider-Man pursues Electro to Winnipeg, Canada, where the web-slinger becomes involved with a kids' hockey team, just as one of the team's stars begins to dabble in drugs. The four comics from this series were re-released for specialty shop distribution. These comics differ slightly, but fairly obviously, from the original giveaways. The giveaways have no cover price and their numbering is larger than is standard for comics, while the re-released versions sport cover prices and normal-sized numbering.

In Cap's drug-awareness book, he breaks up a drug ring that is attempting to hook a group of Little Leaguers. It has been reprinted a number of times by different sponsors – the FBI, Waldbaums, and several insurance companies. It is always clear which version you have because the sponsor's logo is on the cover, and the Waldbaum's version has some $30.00 worth of store coupons bound into the center of the book.

Between 1979 and 1983, Marvel issued a number of comics as inserts in various newspapers in the mid-west. These stories, mostly starring Spider-Man and co-featuring the Hulk, were sponsored by local department stores (Sanger Harris, May D&F, The Jones Store), and bore the logo of the newspaper as well. These newspapers included the Columbus Dispatch, Chicago Tribune, Dallas Times-Herald, The San Antonio Express News, Denver Post, Tulsa World, and Kansas City Star.

All of these stories had Peter Parker travelling to the city in question on assignment for the Daily Bugle, and Spidey getting involved in an adventure of some sort. Most of these tales also involved a guest star or two, including Firestar and Iceman, and Dr. Doom. Occasionally, the co-stars would be real people; the Dallas Cheerleaders showed up in one. In those stories sponsored by a local department store, some of the action would naturally occur in that store.

One newspaper supplement that did not star Spidey featured the X-Men at the Texas State Fair. In this '83 adventure, Magneto and the X-Men travel to the State Fair to recruit Daniel Wiley, a.k.a. Eques. He initially sides with Magneto, until Magneto's battle with the X-Men inadvertently endangers some horses. Then Daniel switches sides; eventually he chooses to stay in Dallas tending his horses, rather than permanently joining the X-Men.

All in all, these stories are fairly entertaining, and are worth collecting for their novelty nature. Also of note are the ads in these books, as many of them sport Spidey or the Hulk hawking products. Some even offer special Marvel-related items.

SUPERHEROES AS SALES TOOLS

Why not "hire" a comic book hero to pitch your product? Especially if it's aimed at kids! These comics fall into two different categories. First, there are the comics that are simply packed into comic-related toys, and then there are the comics that are designed for non-comic items.

The following fall under the first category: Marvel and Ideal produced a 16-page Evel Knievel model, while Aurora produced a number of comics/assembly instructions for their line of hero models. These comics included Tonto, the Lone Ranger, Spider-Man, and the Hulk.

In 1981, Amurol Products Company issued a short-lived line of mini-comics that came packed with bubble gum. These 10-page comics included the Hulk, Spidey, Spider-Woman, Captain America and Archie. Each of the Marvel comics delivered a brief version of the hero's origin, plus a short battle with one of their foes, while the Archie book served up a typical Archie story. Since 1978, Pez has issued dispensers with superhero heads. Naturally, they packed a short (6-page) strip with the dispenser. Naturally, too, Spidey and the Hulk were there.

Much more recently, with Paragon Software's computer games, Marvel packed a comic in with the software. Much akin to the Scott Adams International Software comics and games of a few years earlier, these comics offered insight into the play of the games. However, unlike those games and comics, these were packed inside the computer games, and were never available for sale separately. Also, Paragon only packed comics in their first two games, Dr. Doom's Revenge (with Cap and Spidey), and The Uncanny X-Men. Both of the comics came rolled up and stuffed in all versions of the games (Commodore 64, IBM-PC, etc.).

Pushing its own product, in 1982 Marvel issued a 16-page all newsprint, color comic that promoted comic book collecting for fun and profit. This comic was adapted from Sunshine Comics' Comics For Fun, Comics For Profit.

Filling the second category are the comics (most of which star Spidey) which are just a straight plug for a particular product, like toothpaste or detergent. Check the listing at the end of this article for more information.

Perhaps the most ambitious giveaway Marvel has ever attempted is a Spider-Man vs. Venom comic, featuring Daredevil. In this comic (which is the only one designed to affect Marvel continuity), DD travels to the Vault as Matt Murdock to defend Venom, with Spidey in tow as a hostile witness for the defense. This book can be acquired by sending a donation of $5.00 or more to U.N.I.C.E.F.; one comic per mailing. The book leads directly into Venom's new series, and has a heavy-stock, raised imprint cover (and a full color poster).

GIVEAWAYS IN THE MINI-MARKET

In 1988, Marvel issued a special line of mini-comics that were designed to be given away as a Halloween treat. These comics were all reprinted stories from the regular line of comics. Measuring 4.25" x 6.25", these 16-page comics stripped away non-essential parts of the stories, and compressed the rest into a cohesive tale. The comics came four to a polybagged set, with one featuring heroes from the main line (Spidey, X-Men, Cap), plus characters from their Star line of kids comics (Heathcliff, Alf, Care Bears, and the Flintstone Kids).

These mini-comics proved to be an innovative way to introduce young readers to the world of comics. (A similar Halloween-related product appeared in 1991, when Skybox Impel offered a line of three-pack trading cards with Marvel heroes, Archie, and others).

Another mini that Marvel issued came bound inside Esquire and Eye Magazines ('69). This mini appeared in an unusual size (6 3/4" x 5"), and reprinted Amazing Spider-Man #42. The 17-page book, being wider than tall, runs the main story two to three panels across, and removes all subplots. The final page is in black and white, appears on the inside back cover, and features a classic Romita Spidey pose.

AUDIO COMICS

During the '60's and '70's, Marvel, issued a series of comics and record sets. Their first one was a series that reprinted the origins of some of their biggest stars (the FF, Spidey, the Avengers, and Thor). These comics and records were a straight-out audio retelling of the comic, where the listener could follow the comic while the record played.

A later "rockomic" starring Spider-Man and Dr. Strange presented a new retelling of Spidey's origin. This set had the comic panels printed on the interior flaps of the record jacket for the listener to follow. The strip had no word balloons. Power Records later produced a series of 45's packed with reprints of Marvel Comics. These included Spider-Man, Planet of the Apes, Man-Thing, Werewolf by Night and others, including many DC characters like Batman and Superman. This series also represented Space 1999, Star Trek, and 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea.

MARVEL IN THE BULL MARKET

Late in 1990, Marvel Comics went public; it began to trade stock on the New York Stock Exchange. While this probably doesn't affect the average fan, it did result in a new type of giveaway, as Marvel began to issue its Quarterly and Annual Reports in the form of comics.

Of the the two Quarterly Reports are simply four-page, slick comics sporting different heroes spouting financial information for the stockholder. Third Quarter '91 features the Hulk and Spider-Man, while the First Quarter '92 serves up the cast and crew of Marvel's "Big Guns" promotion (Punisher, Nomad, Silver Sable, and Cage), who kick in doors and reel off the new numbers. The 1991 Annual Report is a 36-page magazine-sized report, the first eight pages of which are in the form of a comic, wherein virtually every major star in the Marvel Universe sings the praises of the company. This section is to inform the uninitiated what Marvel is all about, and gives some facts and figures that non-comic book oriented stockholders might not know. The next six pages fill the reader in on licensing, publishing, and advertising information; the rest is financial information.

"Currently, we're having new ideas about the group as a whole," Neary continued, "I want to heavily exploit the hi-tech angle and to make them more threatening. Their primary aim is soon to be just opponents for our heroes; it's an evolving aspect."

It has just been announced that Liam Sharp, Marvel UK's star artist is starting work on an X-Title and other Marvel British artists and writers are popping up on US books. In retrospect, will this mean that the UK is in danger of becoming a breeding ground for talent for the U.S.?

"Not at all," stated Neary. "Our artists come in and draw downstairs every day. They're a team. They're aware that there's always an open invitation for them to work on U.S. books if they want. Some have already worked for that market. Although, it's kind of arduous working for someone 3,000 miles away. It's expensive to even talk to them. There are delays in the mail, things go missing; so, some of them prefer it this way.

Who are these guys, anyway?

"As someone who's done it, I can appreciate why they'd want to go and work on a major U.S. title. It's a great buzz seeing Spidey when you've worked on it. It's what a lot of artists and writers dream of, so I'd be the last person to try and stop them. At the moment, it's working well. Our people do stuff in between British assignments and then come back. It's kind of working the other way at the moment, we have a few Americans working for us. Alan Davis is coming back, also. We've got Europeans coming into the picture! Also, we just picked up two brilliant new Spanish artists who I'm very excited about and think will become major names, so I don't see any problems there."

On the question of utilizing fully painted artwork, Neary explained that painted artwork, "sells about a third of the amount of drawn counter parts. Digitek and Nightraven looked beautiful and are both fine for the trade paperback market, but after the initial fuss over graphic novels, the market never really expanded that much. Demographically speaking, this disappointed the mainstream comic readers. Sales peak at about age 14, so at that point you're probably reading what's selling the most. As you get older, the slide begins and what is aimed at you is reflected in its sales. The painted books usually sell to a higher age group, which isn't to say that these books didn't sell, just that they're less mainstream. That wouldn't stop me putting them out because I like the work as well."

Marvel U.K.'s success has led them to expand by creating a new imprint provisionally called Frontier. Several new titles are emerging, marketed towards a slightly more mature audience. The Frontier line combines real characters, with haphazard powers, science fiction and more. A project close to Neary's heart is Bloodseed.

"That started with a conversation between Liam and myself," Neary said, "Liam's background is that he used to be Don Lawrence's assistant, which is where he sort of perfected his art, so superheroes are comparatively new to him. He's now drawing in a very mainstream style but he's capable of all kinds of things. I was telling him about an old character I once drew for Warren Comics called 'Hunter'. Something which I've had in mind for years was to develop themes that were started in that strip. It was basically about a barbarian in the midst of a ruined hi-tech world. Liam showed an interest so we started throwing ideas around. What started as an indulgent idea was suddenly up and running. I got together a list of events, notes, rough dialogue, not even a script, and passed it onto Liam. He began working on it and it's looking great."

This and the other new titles like Children of the Voyagers, Dances With Daemons and Immortalis seem to lean towards the Vertigo style line, commercially sound but not just caped crusaders. For instance, Children of the Voyager's explores an immortal journeying through time collecting together pieces of his soul which he had lost in time. These pieces have formed lives of their own, never knowing they were part of something greater. Coupled with Wild Thing and the new Death's Head II series (to name but a few) Marvel UK is attempting to forge two strong, distinctive and ongoing successful lines.

Applying the British style of comics characters to the American formula of superheroics, Marvel UK has created a unique hybrid that has stormed the American marketplace, returning Britain as a creative and commercial force in the comic book industry in America.

BUILDING YOUR COLLECTION

By William A. Christensen
Mark Seifert

Somewhere in between the time you bought your first comic book and the time you bought your first comic book price guide, collecting became more than an idle pastime for you. Many collectors take a "kid in a candy store" approach to their hobby. This method can lead to frustration, and worse: dropping out of the hobby all together. Have you ever regretted buying, or not buying, a comic book you really wanted? Have you ever stopped collecting for awhile, only to later return and spend mega-bucks for what you missed? If so, it's time to start giving some thought to your buying habits. With a little planning, you can put together an outstanding collection and have fun while doing it.

Collecting Considerations

Consider why you buy comics to begin with. Speculation and entertainment are often cited reasons, but very few collectors are in the hobby purely for one reason or the other. Collectors who would never dream of selling their books usually have a good idea of their collection's value. Conversely even those with no interest in reading most comics buy them because of the cover, or the characters, or the artist. Usually, a combination of motivations shape collections. It's important to sort out how you feel about both the investment and entertainment sides of the coin so you can determine the age, type, and condition of books to look for. Your financial situation is another important factor. Budget your new book and back issue purchases, and figure in a little extra for those unexpected deals that come along that you can't afford to pass on. Don't forget to consider the cost of preserving your collection with bags, boards, and boxes. As the collection acquires a substantial value, consider having it insured. The time you have to devote to the hobby determines the scope of your collection. Collecting can take quite a bit of your free time, especially if you intend to read everything you buy. Budgeting your time can help you keep from losing interest or being overwhelmed by your collection. Choose goals that will take a while to achieve and hold your interest at the same time.

Finally, nearly everyone overlooks the size consideration. Large collections can add considerably to your time and monetary commitment, with maintenance and insurance alone. Don't forget to plan for the future. Make sure you have the space for what you want to achieve. If you move often, consider how to transport your collection.

Choosing the Right Books For Your Situation

Once you've thought about your motivations and considered the time, financial, and space constraints, it's time to consider what kind of books would be best for your situation. There are new/recent, 70's, Silver Age, and Golden Age books for everyone's tastes. Each of these categories have distinct advantages.

New and recent (1980's-current) books are the easiest to buy. Almost any comic shop or mail order service will carry the new books you need. Sticking to new and recent books is an inexpensive way to get into the hobby and find out what you like. Furthermore, if you and the seller are careful, there are no condition problems to consider. New and recent comics are ideal for the beginning collector.

New books are also the best short-term investments. It is not uncommon in the current market for a book to jump to the $10 to $15 dollar range in under a month. To take advantage of this, keep your eyes open by making regular trips or calls to shops and reading the price guides and industry news very carefully. With experience, you will learn when it's best to take a small profit now instead of gambling for bigger long term profit. It's best to gain that experience with relatively inexpensive new books.

70's books are currently one of the hottest areas of collecting. Prices on some books like Marvel Spotlight #12 and Amazing Spider-Man #101 have increased rapidly in a short period of time, and there are many other overlooked key books that will likely increase in the near future. There are still many inexpensive high grade copies of all of these books on the market. If your looking for a mid-range investment from a few months to a couple of years, 70's books may be your best bet. Prices on many of these books currently vary widely from region to region, so a little searching can turn up some great deals. As many collectors are discovering, these books have many ties to current titles that have long been overlooked.

The Silver Age (1956-1968) books are the blue chip commodity of the comic market. Silver Age books make very safe long term investments. These books allow you to amass a sizeable investment with just a handful of books. You'll have to spend more time and effort searching for them, but that can be part of the fun of collecting.

Golden Age (1938-1949) books are currently experiencing a resurgence in popularity. Silver Age books have risen in value so rapidly over the past few years that many Golden Age books are now inexpensive by comparison. As with Silver Age, you can keep your Golden Age collection manageable in size while still doing something significant in terms of value. Many collectors are attracted to the historical significance of these books.

Grading Considerations

Collecting books from the 70's or earlier requires a good understanding of how condition effects the value and investment potential of a comic.

Advantage of buying low grades:

If you plan to amass a large collection of older books, it will be much easier and more inexpensive to buy lower grade books. Higher grade copies of some books, especially key books, simply aren't readily available in the marketplace. Some dealers have difficulties selling lower grade books, so you can often get excellent deals on them. Possibly the greatest advantage of low grade books is that they can be read and enjoyed without too much fear of damaging them.

Advantage of buying high grades:

High Grade books are always in demand. It is usually easy to sell a high grade book. Higher grade books are much more difficult to find, as well as more expensive, but some collectors will pay multiples of guide prices for high grade copies, so when you need to sell, your investment may pay off big.

Although buying high grade vintage comics can be profitable, it's important not to set unrealistic goals. There are no flawless Silver and Golden Age comics. If that's what you set your sights on, you'll probably get discouraged with the hobby quickly. In all cases, the highest grade copies available on the market can be considered investment grade material.

Kinds of Books to Buy

No matter what age or condition you buy, you'll still have to decide whether to collect key books, runs of books, or do a little of both. Keep your own likes and dislikes in mind as well as what the guide notes as important.

Key books are sought after by many collectors and, therefore, large dealers usually keep keys in stock. This works to your advantage when it's time to sell. It also allows a great deal of flexibility. If you concentrate on keys, a collection of any size can be maintained. This theme can be expanded to include books by your favorite creators or containing your favorite characters.

Buying runs is more of a challenge, so it will take much longer. However, dealers and other collectors are often eager to buy complete runs of Golden and Silver Age titles. There's really an art to completing a run of a long title. It is best to get early and key issues out of the way as soon as you can afford to. These issues will often increase in value much more than the later issues.

Some titles have had short runs, and many collectors often like this because it's easy to complete the set. Silver Surfer from the Silver Age and Nova from the '70's are good examples of this.

Buying Multiples

If you plan to stick to new books for investment purposes, balance the need for diversity with the temptation to buy multiple copies of a single book. If you feel sure a book will increase in value, it's a good idea to buy in multiples of at least five or ten as your budget allows. Dealers often prefer to buy back in quantity, and may not bother with your insignificant copy of the book even if they need it. On the other hand, you shouldn't bet the farm on just a handful of titles. Even the astute collector guesses wrong occasionally. Don't spend more than you can afford to lose, and choose a wide range of books to invest in.

Where to apply your planning

Now that you know what you're looking for, where do you go to find the books you need? Mail order, conventions, and your local stores all have their advantages. The more sources you have to buy from the better.

Mail order: There's probably no book that has ever been published that you can't buy by mail. Every collector should explore this option, since sooner or later you're going to need something you can't find locally. Golden and Silver Age collectors will almost certainly need to turn to mail order at some point. Establishing a good relationship with dealers is important, and will help you acquire the books you need.

Local stores: These are a good source for new books and information. Visiting your local dealer regularly is a great way to keep tabs on the latest trends. Even if your dealer doesn't keep a large stock of Silver and Golden Age on hand, he can often refer you to someone who does.

Conventions: Keep your eyes on trade publications for conventions in your area. There will be dealers carrying all types of books in attendance. With many dealers in competition in one place you can often get great deals.

Make Smart Decisions And Set Goals

Make informed decisions and always keep your goals in mind when you buy comics. A little planning can help you build a much better collection. Thinking about your motivations, finances, time, and space constraints will help you get much more out of your hobby. It will also make buying and selling much easier and far more enjoyable.

Every Collector Values A Second Opinion

BACK ISSUE BITS

In back issues, Valiant is still the king, and the hottest of the bunch is Solar #14. It's the first appearance of Bender, who didn't do much in that issue. Furthermore he didn't do much in #15. However, when he meets up with Master Darque in the forthcoming Secret Weapons, he will receive power that will shake the Valiant universe.

Bloodshot is hot, hot, hot! His first appearances in Eternal Warrior #4 and #5 still continue to rise. Even the very recent H.A.R.D.Corps #5, with Bloodshot, is starting to rise. But is that just because of Bloodshot, or does it have more to do with the first Bernard Chang artwork? (Valiant has been touting Chang as the next big artist). His work on Archer & Armstrong #9 may cause that price to go up also.

Fans of Rai have been searching for #1-5 of this series. They are all pre-Unity, and very hard to find. Turok still continues to excite interest, and Magnus #12, Archer and Armstrong #2, and X-O #14 and #15 are becoming very rare commodities.

Superman is coming back, and the "Death" issues are going six feet under. As anticipated, once the news of Supes' return hit, the market began to dry up for those issues. However, as speculation rises on how he will come back, some Superman back issues are beginning to really move. People are trying to guess who Doomsday really is. (Is he the "Sandman" Superman from Superman Special #1? Was he the gift from Brainiac at the end of Superman #66? Is he the Bizarro introduced in the Man of Steel limited Series #5 back in 1986? Fans are looking for these issues and the prices are going up, up, and away).

Justice League America, surprisingly, has been a sell out these past five months. In #69, the League gets trashed by Doomsday, thus causing a big upswing in price, and the first aftermath of Superman's death is chronicled in #70. (Both of these issues were reprinted). A new team is introduced in #71, and fans of the Ray and the Black Condor are now jumping on the League bandwagon; #72 brings back the old team from pre-Crisis days (or does it?); and #73 reveals that it was all due to Dr. Destiny mucking things up again.

™&© 1993 Voyager Communications, Inc.

Sandman, Hellblazer, and Doom Patrol are all going through their yearly revivals, thanks to Vertigo. Fans of Hellblazer are looking for #41 through #46, as these issues set the pace for the series from that point on. Sandman fans want all back issues of Sandman – but that's nothing new. Doom Patrol victims want #57 of that series, as it updates the origin story.

Over at Marvel, everybody loves Jae Lee. All of his work, from Marvel Comics Presents to Namor is resulting in rapidly rising revenue. Namor #26 is one of the hottest books on the back issue market.

Why are gimmick covers still being sought after? The fans complain about them all the time; so why do they continue to rise in price? Well, gimmick covers usually occur in special issues of a series, and we all know you can't miss a comic like Amazing Spider-Man #375 just because it has a gold foil cover. On one hand, not everyone can afford these issues; on the other hand they always seem to sell out. After that, because supply is short, demand rises and the gimmick covers continue.

Here's another point for the readers of our magazine to ponder – Why, exactly, is Marvel pushing the 30th anniversary of their characters? Surely, the 25th anniversary is a much bigger deal than the 30th. Is this just an extra push for sales? Or is Marvel really trying to do something to please the fans?

Meanwhile, everyone is waiting for the day when Image can get their books out on time. This seems to be the only thing keeping them from dominating the market. The coupon books are still hot, and Spawn #8 is expected to be very hot.

Until next month, keep your comic book hats on.

HOT FUN IN THE SUMMERTIME:
Marvel Summer Releases

By Neil Hansen

Marvel is premiering many new heroes and new #1's from May through August, in between thirtieth anniversary celebrations of the X-Men and Avengers.

As part of the celebration, both groups appear in Avengers #366 (by Bob Harras, Steve Epting and Tom Palmer) where they team up in an attempt to rescue Luna from Magneto's acolytes. Backing the celebration is a four issue Avengers limited series featuring the return of Kang the Conqueror in a sequel to last year's Fantastic Four, Captain America and Thor Annuals where Terminatrix battles Immortus. In addition, Marvel intends to reprint Avengers #1 (with the origin) and #16 (when Hawkeye, Scarlet Witch and Quicksilver joined the team).

Thor, the most powerful Avenger joins forces with other Thors, Thunderstrike, Beta Ray Bill and Dargo (the Thor of the future), to form the Thor Corps when Dargo's future is threatened by Demon Staff. This new four issue mini-series is an attempt from Marvel to renew interest in the Thunder God and his universe.

The X-Men, on the other hand, face Magneto's return with a great deal of anxiety as the story begins in X-Force #25, followed by Uncanny X-Men #304, X-Men #25 (where Magneto conquers Wolverine, beginning changes that have repercussions in his own book), X-Factor #92 and Wolverine #75 (where the changes are felt). Marvel is also adding some new titles to the X-Men family including: the Xavier Files, exploring the mind of Professor X; The X-Men Survival Guide to the Mansion, a spiral bound 48 page guide featuring blueprints of the Danger Room, the Blackbird, Cerebro and other X-Men related items; a new four issue Wolverine limited series as the X-Men's most popular mutant battles Nightmare, Dr. Strange's old foe in a story written by Judge Dredd writers Alan Grant and John Wagner, and drawn by Darkhawk designer/artist Mike Manley; a Sabretooth limited series by Larry Hama and Mark Texiera with a guest appearance by Wolverine; a Deadpool limited series by Fabian Nicieza, Joe Madureira and Mark Farmer; and finally, a new X-Men 2099 series as a future extension of Marvel's 2099 books.

Meanwhile, from the spider's web comes four new titles. Venom is back in another series, courtesy of writer David Michelinie and pencillers Mark Bagley and Ron Lim, as he battles a horde of symbiote-controlled humans. Spider-Man and Ghost Rider are slated to guest star.

In exploring other heroes and villains in the Spider-Man mythos, Marvel is also trying to make the Prowler "a heavyweight for the nineties" as Glen Herdling and Scot McDaniel explore the potential of this hero in the middle of an action packed story. Puma, another hero whose relationship with Spidey has always been shaky, establishes himself as a superhero of major proportions in a four issue mini-series. The Silver Surfer guest stars in this one. Lastly, Spider-Man battles Dr. Octopus, Stegron, Rhino, Beetle, the Answer and many more in The Lethal Foes of Spider-Man limited series by Danny Fingeroth, Scot McDaniel and Brad Vancata.

That other New York swinger, Daredevil, is receiving his own limited series care of DD's biggest guns, Frank Miller, John Romita, Jr. and Al Williamson (all of whom have handled the character in his prime) as they explore the origin of the Man Without Fear.

Other new series within the Marvel Universe encompass: a new Night Thrasher series by Fabian Nicieza and Javier Saltares; Punisher: The Origin of Microchip recounting how Frank Castle met his computer expert; and Infinity Crusade, the third and final installment of the Infinity trilogy featuring infinite Marvel heroes by Jim Starlin, Ron Lim and Terry Austin.

From the Marvel Universe to the Barkerverse, as Marvel journeys into four different realms. First, Clive Barker fuses the concepts of Dr. Strange, Aliens and the Comedy Channel with Hocum & Hex. In this series, writer Frank Lovece and artist Anthony Williams probe Barker's world through the eyes of Trip Munroe, stand-up comedian who becomes a magician assigned to defend the Earth with disastrously humorous results.

Second on the list of new Barker titles is Hyperkind, exploring the world of superheroics with a cynical eye as a recovering drug addict, a spoiled rich girl, a street kid, and a jock receive super powers. According to editor Marc McLaurin, these teenagers have more grit than "even X-Force, as they're from the streets and very, very real." Fred Burke, Mark Pacella and Scott Hanna handle the creative chores.

The third of our quartet is Ectokid, a comic book presenting the exploits of a fourteen year old able to enter the Here and Hereafter through a dimensional plane called the Ectosphere. James Robinson, Steven Scroce and Bob Dvorak interpret Barker's vision in this one.

At the end of the Barkerverse tour comes Saint Sinner, concerning a man freed of a psychotic spirit's control to become the patron saint of lost souls. Philip Fetter, the lead, is described as a cross between DC's Sandman and Mephisto as he deals with two equal forces of good and evil within himself.

Regarding good and evil, Epic is publishing Mike Baron and Mark Nelson's Feud. This book concerns a war between four races on an alien planet, each race having a close connection with one of the four elements: fire, air, water and earth. Though each of the races wish to dominate the others, they are also dependent on the others for survival.

Marvel Annual Update

In addition to all the new titles and anniversary celebrations, Marvel is using its main superhero annuals to introduce new characters into the Marvel Universe, both villains and heroes. Between May and August, eighteen potential stars make their debuts, using the annuals as a starting point. The following is a list of some of these characters, and shipping dates, for the annuals:
